A book review by Umar (Y6)

The spy who loves school dinners.

I like this book because its childish but it gets you thinking about what is going to happen next. I will recommend this book to people aged around 7—11 years. This book doesn't make you think but also teaches you different languages such as French. This book is about a group of kids who approach a new student who is foreign and comes from France. The group of kids knew some French but they were surprised that she doesn't understand them so they came up with a plan they thought if they take her to there secret room underground she is going to become social but that does not work.....

Helping your child

It is important we do not rush our children when learning about new concepts and give them time to understand these new concepts.

Limit technology to a fixed time including the television.

Set dates with your children giving them beneficial trips to look forward to so they can learn and their brain, which is like a sponge at a young age can learn new things.
